PASSAGE

Remembering and forgetting are fairly big issues in learning. Short-term memory has a limited capacity and information disappears fast unless you can shift it into long-term memory. Most of the information that we receive is not stored, or retained, but quickly lost—probably at least 50% almost immediately and 20% more after 24 hours. Review quickly and repeatedly to improve your memory retention.

We all have the natural ability to divide our attention, e.g., chatting while listening to music. But when we focus exclusively on material we are attempting to learn, we have a better chance to complete the memory task quickly and accurately. It is also important to pay attention to get information right the first time. It's difficult to replace wrong information with the right information.

18. If we want to memorize something, we should _____.
1. review it every day
  2. listen to music at the same time
  3. learn memorization techniques
  4. focus and pay attention
  5. use both short-term and long-term memory
19. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the passage?
1. We can move information from short-term to long-term memory.
  2. We forget more than half of what we have learned after 24 hours.
  3. We remember when the information is transferred from short-term to long-term memory.
  4. Correct information is easier to be replaced than wrong information.
  5. We should make sure what we are trying to remember is correct.
20. The purpose of the author is to _____.
1. suggest how we can improve our memory
  2. explain how information is stored in our brain
  3. illustrate how a memory task is completed
  4. show us the functions of memory in a learning process
  5. persuade us to improve our ability to learn

21. Which statement best expresses the overall idea of the passage?

1. Humans naturally divide their attention when receiving new information.
2. Successful learners are capable of remembering a lot of information.
3. Reviewing what we want to memorize repeatedly is the best way to improve our memory.
4. We remember well if we pay attention when receiving new information and review it soon after.
5. Information is retained longer in long-term memory because short-term memory has limited space.
